

IN FOR A LANDING

Sentinel Photo/EMILY ROTH

A Boeing 737-400 touches down at the Mt. Vernon Outland Airport on Monday morning, on arrival from Detroit. The aircraft landed in Mt. Vernon to pick up automotive parts before continuing its journey to Louisville, Ky. According to Airport Director Chris Collins, the plane is much larger than what the airport typically sees, and is the same model used by Southwest Airlines.

9-15-15